Hoedad Proud

Landing an interview with a Nobel Prize laureate within days after the prize is announced is an amazing feat for any reporter (“Hoedad Nobel Prize Winner,” EW, 10/10). Congratulations to EW intern Savannah Brown for her story about Gary Ruvkun and his “extremely magical” experience as a Hoedad member in Eugene back in 1973. That he remains so connected to Eugene after more than 50 years is a testament to what a great city this is!

Eugene Weekly Strong

I am thrilled to learn that Jody Rolnick is the new business manager at the Weekly. She brings long years of diverse experience in the local print media into the mix. As someone deeply involved in the grass-roots saving of Civic Stadium, which is now Civic Park, a true community gem, it is my opinion that none of this would have come about without the calm, timely hands-on help of Rolnick and her son Gabe, who as a senior at South Eugene High School initiated a “signing statement” in favor of keeping the Civic acres in recreation in perpetuity. From their lead we garnered 6,600 signatures in 72 hours, and kept the Kroger corporation from putting up another mall.

Recently, Camilla Mortensen, Rolnick and I got together for two long evenings of newspaper talk. My parents wrote and managed newspapers most of their working lives. I am very interested in keeping this small paper alive and independent, including from full-page corporate cigarette ads. I am confident these two newspaper people are in agreement. They are a dynamic duo, complementing each other in a way that bodes very well for the long-term viability of this vital member of the local print community.

At present Tsunami Books is working with the Weekly to create a prominent new page of local advertising, specifically for businesses, and individuals, who want it known that we support the paper. Stay tuned for details.

Thanks, Camilla Mortensen, and thanks, Jody Rolnick, for your work.

This is Higher Education?

Thank you, Eugene Weekly, for revealing what’s going on at the University of Oregon (“Kept in the Dark,” EW, 10/3). What exactly are the students learning? That women are something for men to use and abuse. That men have the privilege of taking whatever they want? Do the boys think that the girls are not human beings and treat them thusly?

This mindset which has been validated by our former president will make any kind of relationship that involves men and women unsuccessful. The females will look at males as someone that may assault her. The men will justify their actions by believing that this behavior is OK. And ruin their lives.

Shame on the University of Oregon which is also teaching these students by their neglect the same message. Our precious daughters and sons are learning sad lessons. We should tear the doors down!

More About Hart Mountain

EW’s feature on the Hart Mountain Wildlife Refuge was a nice human interest story about the reporter’s visit in June — before a fire made her story mostly irrelevant (“Where the Bighorns and the Antelope Play,” EW, 10/10). Half the refuge burned this August.

Neither in the article itself, nor in the online follow-up, did we learn what burned. Did the hot springs area and its popular free campground burn? (Yes, alas.) Did the refuge headquarters burn? (No, but the fire came within a few feet.) Is anything open? (Yes: Poker Jim Ridge, Flook Lake, Petroglyph Lake and the road through the refuge to Steens Mountain.) Hidden in the next to last sentence of the online article is the explosive news: All of the most popular parts of the refuge will be closed to the public until June 15, 2025. That was the story that should have come first.

Measuring the Details

If you look just at the headings, Measure 118 looks fantastic, but the devil is in the details and the details are terrible.

If you like fewer jobs, and lower incomes for Oregonians, less money to spend on education, health care, and public safety, when we need more teachers and police, not fewer, you will love Measure 118. I don’t like any of these things. I will vote no, you should too.

Measure 118 acts like a strange sales tax. It taxes big grocery chains and their suppliers, and will raise food costs for all Oregonians. Because most farmers and suppliers will raise their prices to pay the tax and retailers will too, your price may go up more than you think. Most other things you buy will cost more too. I will be voting no, you should Vote no too.

I’ve studied many tax proposals during 18 years in the Legislature and nearly 12 years as the Chair of the House Revenue Committee. I support taxation to help Oregonians live better by supporting basic services. Measure 118 is a mess, beguiling us with false hope for a free lunch.

Don’t be fooled by Measure 118. Vote no on Measure 118!

Power pop musician cancels Eugene concert after questions resurface about past sexual assault allegations

BY SAVANNAH BROWN

Ken Stringfellow has been trying to claw back his music career since 2021 when four women accused the co-founder of '90s power pop band The Posies of years of sexual abuse. His fellow members of The Posies quit the band in disgust. Alternative rock bands Big Star and REM — with whom Stringfellow has toured over the years — also disowned him.

Stringfellow, 55, has since recorded a new album, Circuit Breaker, and scheduled a solo tour, which until a few days ago included an Oct. 22 appearance in Eugene.

On Oct. 14, Stringfellow canceled his Eugene appearance. His wife claims the venue — which he was keeping secret until showtime — is undergoing renovations and will not be ready in time. Eugene Weekly asked for the name of the venue to verify the information, but she declined to provide it.

The cancellation follows an interview Stringfellow gave to EW, in which he questioned the motives of women who have leveled allegations against him as he seeks to restart his career.

In 2021, Seattle's NPR affiliate KUOW published an investigative piece detailing specific allegations from three women who say Stringfellow forced them to have sex and bit them hard enough to leave bruises. One woman said Stringfellow forced her into a bathroom and had sex with her, painfully biting her in her genital area after she told him she couldn't have sex that night. Another woman said that she woke up to Stringfellow having anal sex with her. Three women agreed to be named in the KUOW story.

At the time, Stringfellow said the relationships with the women were consensual and denied he was ever violent. Still, Stringfellow took responsibility for how his actions caused pain, and said that he would not criticize the women who made the allegations.

"While we categorically deny these allegations," Stringfellow said in a joint Instagram statement with his wife, Dominique Stringfellow, "we respect these women and do not intend to speak negatively about them."

In promoting his tour, however, Stringfellow has changed his tune. He told EW that he had already responded to the allegations. "I've addressed the situation, and it's time to move on," he said. "None of that, for me, changes anything about my life as an artist."

Stringfellow then turned on the women, calling their allegations "fabrications" and, referring to the instance of anal sex as "practically physically impossible," he also questioned the women's motives.

"I would say that they developed extremely unrealistic expectations of where the relationships would go," Stringfellow tells EW. "They took that rejection to a very dark and immature place and used that as a justification to hurt me in return by any means necessary."

'The problem is that he's trying to use us [his victims] to forward himself. And that is just adding major insult to injury here.'

— KATHERINE MENGARDON

Stringfellow says Circuit Breaker is about overcoming years of challenges and obstacles that his career has faced following the allegations. He tells EW, "The journey of this album was to recalibrate my life, coming from how to deal with these allegations and these impossible challenges and make something beautiful from it." It is being released Oct. 18.

Katherine Mengardon is less than happy about Circuit Breaker's release and tour. She says, "The problem is that he's trying to use us [his victims] to forward himself. And that is just adding major insult to injury here." Mengardon was one of several women who spoke with EW about her allegations against Stringfellow as news of his tour broke.

Mengardon says she spent years in therapy understanding the trauma that she alleges Stringfellow has caused her. "Absolutely don't use us even further. You've already used us once before, you're trying to use us again. Fuck off."

As of press time, Ken Stringfellow is still set to play his Circuit Breaker tour in Seattle Oct. 19, Portland Oct. 20, Astoria Oct. 21 and other future dates.

>>Eugene Weekly is one of 205 media outlets nationwide that won a two-year, $50,000-per-year grant from Press Forward, a national coalition investing more than $500 million to strengthen local newsrooms, close longstanding gaps in journalism coverage, advance public policy that expands access to local news and to scale the infrastructure the sector needs to thrive. More than 900 applications were submitted and 400 finalists were considered for a chance to share the $20 million funding pool. The $100,000 that we are receiving from Press Forward is more than just a grant; it's a demonstration that national funders are investing in our spicy alt-weekly, in our community and in you — our readers! While the grant is great news, we still need local support to sustain our work and keep us in print. Feel free to pile on! Support.EugeneWeekly.com.

>> Eugene is exceptional in so many ways. Right now Eugene is a city without an emergency room. There's hope — McKenzie-Willamette Medical Center announced at a recent health care forum that it's looking to establish a satellite emergency department on the Eugene side of the river. We are also a city without a second water source — we pull our drinking water from the McKenzie River, but EWEB is inching closer to a water treatment plan on the Willamette. In September, the utility submitted a joint permit application to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and Oregon Department of State Lands to address environmental permitting for the project, which would not start construction until 2026. Until recently, Eugene was a city without a parade. Now that we have the BRiGHT Parade downtown, what about being a city with a celebration again?

>>It wasn't unexpected but it was disappointing. Lane County Commissioners David Loveall, Ryan Ceniga and Pat Farr voted Oct. 15 to grant more time for arguments in favor of turning Oakridge's TV Butte into a gravel quarry — even after hearing testimony from over 50 Oakridge residents urging the board to deny the application, and even after the county's own Planning Commission unanimously voted against it. Besides ignoring the environment and tourism issues at stake, the three commissioners failed to listen to their constituents or their own experts.

>>The one thing — other than our readers' everlasting support — that keeps Eugene Weekly running is coffee. That's why we're so jazzed about this October's Coffee Shop Hop! All you have to do to join the fun is walk on over to one of the 17 participating coffee shops in downtown Eugene or one of the two in Downtown Springfield to pick up an adorably illustrated passport. What's the point of participating outside of the caffeine kick? You'll get the chance to explore the various cafés around Eugene and Springfield at a discounted price! Each shop offers a different discount, so be sure to check your passport for details, and note that food is not included in the offer. Each passport sticker counts for one raffle entry for the chance to win a $25 gift card to a coffee shop of your choice. Get walking, and visit WeWalkLane.org/2024-coffee-shop-hop for more info.

More Seats Than Candidates

More than 58 percent of Lane County races are uncontested in the November general election

BY EMMA J NELSON

Those registered to vote in Oregon will find their ballots looking a tad bare this November. There aren't fewer races, though. There are fewer candidates.

Of the 36,049 nationwide political races that Ballotpedia has analyzed so far this year, 75 percent were uncontested — they had only one candidate vie for the position. Ballotpedia is a nonpartisan, nonprofit digital encyclopedia of American politics.

In Oregon, it's closer to 78 percent of races that are uncontested. That number will only increase following the November general elections, as in Lane County alone, 46 of the 78 government seats residents will vote to fill are uncontested. This includes state, county, district and city positions, such as Lane County Sheriff — Clifton G. Harrold — and three state representative seats.

This isn't new for Lane County.

In the 2020 general election, 41 of 73 positions were uncontested or had no candidate, or 56 percent of races. In 2016, it was 40 of 75, or 53 percent. The number of candidates filing has decreased, too. A total of 117 candidates filed for the 2024 general election, compared to 130 candidates filing in 2020 and 147 in 2016.

Chandler James, an assistant professor of political science at the University of Oregon, says Ballotpedia's findings challenge "our basic principles when it comes to our value of democracy."

"Electoral competition adds accountability for candidates," he says. "If they know that they're going to have a competitor, then they behave differently than if they believe that their position is secure. Furthermore, it provides voters a choice. And when voters are given a choice, they're actually able to provide information and express their values and their beliefs regarding how the government should operate."

If contested races are so important for our democracy, then where are all the candidates going?

First, it's important to note that Oregon's primary election in May helped determine who would be appearing on the ballot for the general election. In order to be the only one vying for a seat in the local general election, candidates must win a simple majority, or 50 percent plus 1, of the vote.

Take, for instance, the race for Eugene mayor. In May, Kaarin Knudson faced Stefan Strek and Shanaé Joyce-

Stringer for the Eugene mayoral seat. Knudson won the primary election with a simple majority — over 73 percent — so her name is the only one that appears on the November ballot.

However, not all uncontested races in the general election are decided in the primary.

Rachel Bitecofer, a nationally renowned political strategist and elections forecaster, says there are multiple reasons why local races that aren't decided in the primary election go uncontested in the general.

"To run for office is very labor intensive, and people are very disincentivized to do that when they sense that they can't win," Bitecofer says. There are many factors that impact whether a candidate believes they can win, but one of the largest is party identity.

In 2020, "we figure that 96 percent of people who are Democrats or independents who lean Democrat voted for the Democrat, 96 percent of the Republicans and the people who said they lean Republican voted Republican," Bitecofer says. "When I say that partisanship is the be all, end all of vote choice, I mean it."

With partisanship playing such an integral role in vote choice, she says, it's unlikely that a Republican running in a Democratic district or vice versa would win against an incumbent who aligns with the district's political party. That doesn't even begin to touch on the public's overwhelming lack of interest in local politics.

"For most people, politics begins and ends at the presidency," she says. "With local politics, people think, 'Oh, it's local, so it's close to people. It's going to be something that they're much more interested in.' It's actually the exact fucking opposite."

However, James says voters should still pay attention to the uncontested races and consider whether or not to ink in that little oval, even if it won't affect who takes office.

"It matters for candidates," he says. "It can have some symbolic value depending on the number of votes that are cast relative to the number of votes cast in other races." For instance, if 10,000 people vote on a contested race but only 5,000 people vote on an uncontested one, it sends a message to the uncontested candidate.

Both James and Bitecofer agree that, when it comes time to fill out your ballot, it's important to vote in every race. Even if your vote is against an uncontested candidate.

'For most people, politics begins and ends at the presidency.'

— RACHEL BITECOFER, POLITICAL STRATEGIST

I Vote, You Vote, We All Need to Vote

And here are our recommendations for how to cast your ballot

BY EW EDITORIAL BOARD, PHOTOS BY TODD COOPER AND BOB KEEFER

Nov. 5 is drawing near, Oregon's vote-by-mail ballots are hitting postal boxes and, for what seems like the 100th time in the past 20 years, democracy is on the line.

Vote for president, vote for city councilor, vote in hotly contested races and vote in races with no challengers at all.

Every voting season, Eugene Weekly brings in political candidates to come talk to us. We watch and listen to debates, we observe candidates interacting anywhere from social media to public forums and we argue with friends, family, haters on the internet and each other about who we should endorse.

You don't need to agree with us, but we'd really like you to vote as if your rights depend on it, because they do.

Federal Offices

President

Kamala Harris/ Tim Walz, Democrat

Donald J. Trump/ JD Vance, Republican; Robert F. Kennedy Jr/ Nicole Shanahan, We The People; Cornel West, Progressive; Chase Oliver/ Mike ter Maat, Libertarian; Randall Terry, Constitution; Jill Stein/ Rudolph Ware, Pacific Green

This one should be obvious. Eugene Weekly endorses the Kamala Harris and Tim Walz ticket for democracy and our sanity.

US Representative 4th District

Val Hoyle, Democrat

Monique DeSpain, Republican, Constitution; Dan Bahlen, Libertarian; Justin Filip, Pacific Green

Rep. Val Hoyle seems to raise hackles sometimes — just like her predecessor Peter DeFazio did — and we need that. Politics these days is not for the meek, and Hoyle jumps in feet first on issues from reproductive health to working families. Oregon isn't Oregon without a tiger in Congress and Hoyle has shown in her first term that she is trying to balance the needs of the climate, labor and rural communities.

Statewide

Secretary of State

Tobias Read, Democrat, Independent, Working Families

Dennis Linthicum, Republican, Constitution; Nathalie Paravicini, Pacific Green, Progressive

The Oregon Secretary of State's office has had a lot of drama these past couple years — the latest is the DMV voter errors where it was discovered that ineligible voters were erroneously registered to vote via Oregon's otherwise wildly successful Motor Voter program. Tobias Read has done his homework on the roles of the secretary of state from audits to records, and we have no doubt of the quality of his steady hand on this powerful role that's next in line to the governorship.

State Treasurer

Elizabeth Steiner, Democrat

Brian Boquist, Republican, Constitution; Mary King, Working Families, Pacific Green

Elizabeth Steiner — a medical doctor — has put in the time on the Oregon Legislature's powerful Joint Ways and Means Committee, and she doesn't pull her punches when it comes to issues she cares about, like Oregonians' financial literacy.

Attorney General

Dan Rayfield Democrat, Working Families
Will Lathrop, Republican

A man with experiences on both sides of the law, Dan Rayfield brings a measured approach to the attorney general's office, complete with plans for common sense gun reform, further protections for abortion access and tackling substance abuse. His jump from the Legislature to the AG's office is a logical one, given his almost two decades of experience as an attorney, and his experience and leadership as speaker of the House in the Legislature.

Senate District 5

Jo Beaudreau, Democrat

Dick Anderson, Republican

Jo Beaudreau is a small-business owner from Florence who has served on the city's council and public arts committee. She faces an uphill battle against the incumbent, Republican Dick Anderson, but Beaudreau has snagged endorsements from labor unions and former U.S. Rep. Peter DeFazio as well as the Planned Parenthood PAC of Oregon. District 5 encompasses a huge swath of territory, including all of Lincoln County and parts of Lane, Douglas, Benton and Coos counties.

State Representative House District 7

John Lively, Democrat, Independent, Working Families

Cory Burket, Republican

State Representative House District 8

Lisa Fragala, Democrat

State Representative House District 9

Boomer Wright, Republican; William (Mrk) Mrkvicka, Democrat

State Representative House District 10

David Gomberg, Democrat, Independent, Republican

State Representative House District 12

Michelle Emmons, Democrat

Darin Harbick, Republican

Michelle Emmons has shown time and time again that she cares deeply about the people she seeks to serve. From Oakridge Trails Alliance to Willamette Riverkeeper, to the Oakridge-Westfir Chamber of Commerce and her fight against the big money behind the effort to turn scenic TV Butte into a gravel quarry, Emmons has the experience to get it done. Unlike her MAGA opponent Darin Harbick, Emmons holds no ties to the Jan. 6 insurrection.

State Ballot Measures

Measure 115 [Impeachment]

Authorizes impeachment of statewide elected officials by Oregon Legislature with two-thirds vote by each House; establishes process. Yes.

Curiously, Oregon is the only state in the union without a constitutional amendment giving the Legislature the power to impeach and remove elected state officials. The time is here to correct this oversight. There is no organized opposition to this measure.

Measure 116 [Statewide Compensation Commission]

Establishes “Independent Public Service Compensation Commission” to determine salaries for specified officials; eliminates legislative authority to set such salaries. Yes.

Elected officials should receive salaries that reflect the responsibilities of their jobs — and enable folks from all financial backgrounds to hold office. And salary decisions in Oregon should be independent of political pressure.

Measure 117 [Ranked Choice Voting]

Gives voters the option to rank candidates in order of preference; the candidate receiving the majority of votes in final round wins. Yes.

Ranked Choice Voting has been criticized by opponents who say it could be confusing. But first, let’s not underestimate voters, and second, democracy is messy, as they say. And if there’s one thing we have seen from school boards to the office of the president, we need a better democracy.

Measure 118 [Oregon Rebate]

Increases highest corporate minimum taxes; distributes revenue to eligible individuals; state replaces reduced federal benefits. No.

Eugene Weekly loves the idea of a universal basic income. But this proposal just doesn’t persuade us.

Measure 119 [Cannabis Union]

Cannabis retailers/processors must remain neutral regarding communications to their employees from labor organizations; penalties. No.

The fact the UFCW Local 555 is behind this measure raised our eyebrows — that union hasn’t redeemed itself since its inane recall effort against state Rep. Paul Holvey, but its backers aside, on paper this reads like more rights for workers (something we are all for). However, cannabis employees are already allowed to unionize under federal law, and Measure 119 will make it so any (even already licensed) cannabis dispensary must take that first step towards unionization or lose its licensure. That seems like a problem we don’t necessarily need.

Lane County

Sheriff
Clifton G. Harrold

Lane County Commission

North Eugene Commissioner
Pat Farr

Pat Farr has been the swing vote on the Lane County Board of Commissioners, walking a fine line between the right-wing leaning David Loveall and Ryan Ceniga and the progressives Laurie Trieger and Heather Buch. For EW to endorse him, we’d need to see better votes on issues that matter to rural voters like turning TV Butte into a gravel mine, and to all voters like gerrymandering voting districts. Farr would need to do better to get our endorsement.

South Eugene Commissioner
Laurie Trieger

Laurie Trieger’s knowledge of the issues is broad yet deep, and she relies not only on her own knowledge but on her ability to listen to her constituency.

Lane County Measures

Measures 20-359 to 20-361 are basically housekeeping, vote yes. Measure 20-362 is a gerrymander in progress. Vote no.

Measure No: 20-359 [County Expenditures]

The proposed amendment would repeal Section 32 of the Lane County Charter, which imposes specific limits on annual county expenditures. State laws governing county budgets would continue to apply, as appropriate. Yes.

Measure No: 20-360 [East Alton Baker Park]

The proposed amendment would repeal Section 33 of the Lane County Charter, which imposes restrictions on the use and development of East Alton Baker Park. Lane County no longer owns the land constituting East Alton Baker Park as it was sold to the city of Eugene. Yes.

Measure No: 20-361 [Income Tax]

The proposed amendment would repeal Section 34 of the Lane County Charter, which limits the rate of any Lane County income tax and directs how revenues are to be used. There is not currently any Lane County income tax. Yes.

Measure No: 20-362 [Gerry- mander]

Should Lane County amend the Lane Charter to create redistricting commission, redistrict for 2026, thereafter redistrict after each decennial census? No.

City of Eugene

Mayor

Kaarin Knudson

City Councilor Ward 1
Eliza Kashinsky

City Councilor Ward 2

Matthew Keating

City Councilor Ward 7
Lyndsie Leech

City Councilor Ward 8
Randy Groves

Eugene Water & Electric Board

Wards 1 & 8
Tim Morris

Wards 2 & 3
John Barofsky

Wards 6 & 7
Sonya Carlson

Oakridge

Measure No: 20-364 (Allow voters to show preferences between candidates for city elections, aka STAR Voting) No.

If Oakridge wants to be Ground Zero for Score Then Automatic Runoff (STAR) Voting then more power to that rural community. EW tried STAR for Best of Eugene some years ago and neither we, nor our local voters, were impressed.

Firefighters United for Safety, Ethics and Ecology is celebrating 20 years of advocating for change in wildfire coverage, management and firefighter safety with a fire-themed party and fundraiser this Friday, Oct. 18. “We’re torch bearers for a new paradigm of fire management,” says founder and executive director Timothy Ingalsbee. Ingalsbee spent years working for the U.S. Forest Service as a wildland firefighter and he was also an activist at the frontlines of the Warner Creek blockade in 1994. He recalls watching the Forest Service justify cutting down old-growth trees for the sake of “wildfire prevention,” and he knew something needed to change. FUSEE’s vision for wildfire management is not to fight fire, but to work with fire to mitigate climate change, protect communities and maintain ecosystems. “Fire, in the right times, places, conditions, can be beneficial for the ecosystem,” Ingalsbee says. “Forests can survive and some things thrive with fire.” In 20 years FUSEE has been featured in over 400 news stories and has had a national impact on wildfire policy. FUSEE’s anniversary party will feature live music from vocal ensemble Family Mystic, Eugene pop-punk band Foreal, and Eugene bluegrass band Moon Mountain String Band. There will be no shortage of fiery festivities with fire-spinning collective Fairly Fire putting on a show with fire dancers, fire eating, juggling and more. Settle down with wood-fired pizza, a fire pit and a hot tub and sauna alongside music til midnight. — Sadie Gustavson

FUSEE’s 20th anniversary celebration is 6 pm to midnight, Friday Oct. 18 at Manifestation Eugene, 3675 West 1st Avenue. $30 to $75 (pay a higher ticket price to make a higher donation)

The apples are fresh from the orchard, and it's time for beergarden's annual Cidergarden event! For four days, beergarden will exchange all of its beers on tap with cider, will serve themed flights daily and will feature cideries Schilling Cider (Thursday, Oct. 17), Bend Cider (Friday, Oct. 18) and Mahalo Cider (Sunday, Oct. 20). Each evening is punctuated by a musical performance from a string band, because nothing says cider like string! Meadow Rue kicks off the festivities at 7 pm Thursday. The Willamette Valley-based string quintet features original songwriting and fiddlers galore for you to groove to. The Band Stuff takes over the patio at 7:30 pm Friday with an eclectic mix of alt-folk, bluegrass and '60s rock, followed by Belltower at the same time Saturday. Belltower is made up entirely of University of Oregon students, and the five bandmates have their own unique take on the genre of string. Last but not least, Tuesday String Band wraps up the festival with the Western Oregon University students and alumni that make up the band engaging in banter on stage. On top of the 20-plus ciders on tap, beergarden will serve three new seasonal cocktails for $12 each: Spiced Cider, Apple Fashioned and Backyard Orchard. Want to remember this cider-full event for years to come? Commemorative glasses will be available for the first time in Cidergarden history! You can buy a glass for $5 or a glass with a pour for $12. — Emma J Nelson

OCT 17-26 What's scarier than history? Nothing! Springfield History Museum is hosting its third annual Fright! at the Museum event, and the spooky spectacular kicks off at 4 pm, Thursday Oct. 17. Explore the museum-turned-haunted house with your family, but beware the ghosts of the museum's past lurking among the exhibits! From 4 pm to 6 pm, expect some family-friendly fun, with lighter scares perfect for younger folks. When the clock strikes 6:30 pm, however, the lighting dims and the thrills abound. Those who successfully brave the haunted encounter to come will be rewarded at the museum's recovery station with free snacks and photo ops. What a frightfully good time! Don't worry if you can't make it this weekend; the event continues into the next! Proceeds of the haunted house have the truly terrifying task of supporting museums collections, programs and exhibits. Spooky! — Emma J Nelson

Fright! at the Museum is 4 pm to 8 pm Oct. 17 through Oct. 18 & Oct. 24 through Oct. 26, at Springfield History Museum, 590 Main Street, Springfield. Adult tickets $5, youth tickets (ages 5-18) $3 and kids under 3 get in FREE. Families of 5-plus get in for $20.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS - PARK PLACE BUILDING HVAC PROJECT

This Invitation for Bids (IFB) invites sealed bids from licensed contractors will be received by the Lane Council of Governments (LCOG) until 2:00 p.m., local time, Thursday, November 7, 2024 for the Park Place Building HVAC Project. Briefly, the work of the Project is described as replacement of existing water-cooled condensing units along with related improvements to the building heating and cooling system, including replacement of terminal units, control systems, duct replacement, and electrical work, according to the design furnished by the Bidder.

Sealed bids will be received by Michael Wisth, Government Services Director, until the time of bid closing in either paper copy or by electronic submission as follows:

A. Paper copy. Bids submitted in the form of a paper original must submitted in a sealed envelope addressed and delivered to:

Michael Wisth, Government Services Director
Lane Council of Governments
859 Willamette St., Ste. 500
Eugene, Oregon 97401

The envelope used for the bid must bear the words "BID ENCLOSED" and be clearly marked to identify the contents as a bid for this specific project.

B. Electronic bids. Bids submitted electronically must be sent to Michael Wisth, Government Services Director, at the following email address: mwisth@lco.org.

To be considered, an electronic bid must: 1. Be submitted as an attachment to the email message sent to the email address stated above, 2. Clearly identify, in the subject line of the email, that the email is a bid for this project, and 3. Be entirely in the form of a PDF.

Within two working hours after the date and time when bids are due as stated above, each bidder must submit to LCOG a disclosure of the first-tier subcontractors in the form provided herein, as required by ORS 279C.370. This form must be submitted to the same location email address stated above that may be used for submission of bids.

Interested parties may download a complete set of bid documents from the LCOG website at Bids and IFBs | Lane Council of Governments Oregon (lco.org).

No prequalification of contractors is required. The bid must be accompanied by bid security in the amount of not less than ten percent (10%) of the bid amount. Bidders submitting a bid electronically must include a facsimile of a properly executed bid bond with the electronic bid. Prior to contract award, an original copy of the bond must be delivered to LCOG directly or by registered mail addressed to Michael Wisth, Government Services Director. The successful contractor will be required to furnish 100% performance and payment bonds in the form required by the IFB documents.

A mandatory pre-bid meeting and site tour will be held at 10:00 a.m., local time, Thursday, October 24, 2024 at the project site located at 859 Willamette St., Eugene, Oregon. Attendees are to meet the LCOG representative at the main floor lobby of the building at that time. Attendance at the prebid meeting is mandatory for contractors intending to submit a bid for the work. Interested subcontractors and suppliers are invited to attend.

Each contractor submitting a bid must be licensed with the Oregon Construction Contractors Board (CCB) as a commercial general contractor level 1.

No bid will be considered unless that bid contains a statement by the contractor that the contractor will comply with ORS 279C.840 regarding payment of prevailing rates of wage.

OCT 23

You hum to a melody or tap your feet to a rhythm, then, in your mind's eye, you take the leap of faith and cross the bridge of a pop song. The bridge is that section that connects other parts of the song and can be placed anywhere in the song except the beginning and end. It offers variety and contrast to a piece by changing the mood, tempo or chord progression. For the Scott Amendola-Ben Goldberg-Todd Sickafoose Trio, which plays at The Shedd on Wednesday, Oct. 23, the bridge offers creativity all its own. The trio, all long-term friends, took the bridge work of the jazz great Thelonious Monk to compose work for the album Here to There, available Oct. 25 on the Eugene-based Secret Hatch Records. Amendola on drums and Goldberg on clarinet had previously played for the group Plays Monk, so when Sickafoose on double-bass was recruited in 2022, continuing the Monk theme — this time focusing on the unique sounds and rhythms of the bridges Monk composed — seemed obvious. The result are pieces such as “In Walked” (drawn from Monk’s “In Walked Bud”), “Inter- ospection” (from the song “Introspection”), “Self Evident” (from the song “Evidence”) and “Epistrophy” (from the song “Sad Trophy”). — Dan Buckwalter

The Scott Amendola-Ben Goldberg-Todd Sickafoose Trio performs 7:30 pm Wednesday, Oct. 23, at The John G. Shedd Institute for the Arts, 285 East Broadway. Tickets are $24 to $32 and can be purchased at TheShedd.org.

MUSIC

Croce: I Got A Name

AJ Croce takes to McDonald Theatre on Oct. 19, playing Jim Croce's — his father's — music

BY BENTLEY FREEMAN

AJ Croce says in his imagination, he's on stage with his father, Jim Croce, playing folk music together. "There's moments where I feel like he's right there," he says.

Jim, passed away on Sept. 20, 1973, eight days before AJ's second birthday, in a single plane crash.

He was 30 years old.

"I remember feeling a certain way in his presence," AJ says. "I remember from my very earliest memories, there was always music in the house."

"It's hard to tell which memories blend with home videos and recordings."

A singer-songwriter, Jim Croce defined late '60s early '70s folk with hits like "I Got a Name," "Time in a Bottle" and "I'll Have to Say I Love You in a Song."

Now at 53, AJ says the Croce Plays Croce tour is him playing a role in preserving his father's legacy. "What I discovered really early on in the process of performing the Croce Plays Croce shows, was that it was the legacy of a family, not just of one person," he says.

That's how AJ still feels connected to his father, he says, by being a musician.

"I think it's just the memory of the people we love and the idea of the things we love gives them a life of their own," he says. "As long as we remember the things that are important to us and people and animals that we care about — they live."

By performing his dad's songs for the world to hear and remember, the name Croce lives on, he says.

Initially, AJ wanted to challenge himself to find an identity from out under his father's shadow. However, "I think as soon as no one was expecting me to perform something of my father's, that became the time when it was most fun to perform his music," he says.

Now, AJ invites any Croce fan — from the casual to the diehard — to come and enjoy an evening of song and storytelling.

"The secret of this, of this tour and this concert is the stories that I tell and that are part of who my father was. Now he would perform a show — could be a two hour show — he might only play five or six songs, because he was telling stories and and talking about where the music came from," AJ says.

I've thought countless times of the fact that we may have played this song together.

— AJ CROCE

"I felt like it was really an important facet of it," he says.

AJ has his own emotional connection to his dad's music, too. "'Time in a Bottle' is probably the most powerful [song]. It was written for me," he says.

"I've thought countless times of the fact that we may have played this song together," he says. "It's in my imagination, but it's something that's pretty powerful."

AJ says the journey he's taken to the stage hasn't been easy, and that he never expected to be where he is now. Listening to his father's immense record collection — complete with Fats Domino, Chuck Berry, Mississippi John Hurt, Bessie Smith and so many more — is what inspired AJ to become a musician in his youth.

Then — for as long as he could remember — AJ spent time around his grandmother's upright piano. "There's photos of me before I was one years old, you know, sitting at the piano with a sandwich in one hand and my other hand on the keys," he says.

"It just — it drew me in."

When he was old enough, AJ's mother, Ingrid, gifted him his father's old 1930s Gibson acoustic guitar — the guitar Jim wrote his first records on.

"I didn't inherit some fortunes. I inherited a record collection and a cool, old guitar," AJ says. "It was the best way to make a living that I could think of."

"There really are no guarantees. It's a roller coaster of a career. It's a calling and most of it is not glamorous, but it is really rewarding to be able to entertain an audience and help people just forget the world around them for 90 minutes," AJ says.

Forget your troubles as AJ Croce plays Croce at McDonald Theatre 8 pm, Saturday Oct. 19. Tickets can be purchased online McDonaldTheatre.com ranging from $55 to $95.

SAVAGE Love
BY DAN SAVAGE

I'm a 38-year-old gay male. I recently got back on dating apps, and I've been chatting with other gays online. I'm not unattractive and I get a fair amount of hits when I post pictures. To my surprise, I've accidentally connected emotionally with a few guys who quickly expressed an interest in exploring something long-term with me. The problem is that I was diagnosed with terminal cancer years ago and not given long to live. I've made a miraculous recovery, but I still have cancer, and I'm told it's still terminal. I could pass in weeks, months, or after another couple of years. I haven't lied to any of the men I've been chatting with, but I haven't been entirely forthcoming with them either. It's day two of chatting with these guys and now I'm in some situationships. I don't know what to do. I want to feel normal, but I don't want to string these guys along. Please advise.

— Cancer Announcement Now Could End Relationships

First, CANCER, I'm so sorry about your diagnoses — but given that it's been years since you were given months to live, I'm hoping you've gotten a second, third and fourth medical opinion. Cases of spontaneous remission are rare when it comes to cancer but they have happened, CANCER, and people have been misdiagnosed with cancer. I'm sure it's already occurred to you to explore both possibilities — and ones that haven't occurred to me — but on the off chance you haven't, you might wanna.

Second, CANCER, about the men you've been chatting with for two days — torso pics that went from "sup" to "let's explore something long-term" in 48 little hours — they're bullshitting you. And if you think you're in a relationship or any other kind of 'ationship with any of these men, CANCER, you're bullshitting yourself. Forgive me for being blunt... but you've gotten worse news and survived... and I don't wanna waste what little time you have left beating around the bush.

Dating sites and hookup apps are crawling with fakes and flakes, CANCER, and while swapping text messages with a stranger can be fun and sometimes it feels like we're catching feelings for someone we haven't actually met in person yet, when someone you've never met claims they wanna make explore a long-term commitment... that's a red flag. That person either isn't who they say they are (and they're about to hit you up for the money they need to buy a plane ticket to come and meet you) or they are who they say they are (and they've just outed themselves as too emotionally immature and/or too emotionally manipulative to risk meeting, much less dating).

In that pile of responses you've gotten, CANCER, there are guys who are open to chatting but who aren't trying to rush things — chat with them, block the others.

FREE Will Astrology

BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): As a young adult, I lived in a shack in the North Carolina woods. I was too indigent to buy a car or bicycle, so I walked everywhere I needed to go. Out of necessity, I discovered the practical power of psychic protection. I envisioned myself being surrounded by an impenetrable violet force field and accompanied by the guardian spirits of a panther, wolf, and bear. This playful mystical practice kept me safe. Though I was regularly approached by growling dogs and drunk thugs in pickup trucks, I was never attacked. Now would be an excellent time for you to do what I did: put strong psychic protection in place. You're not in physical danger, but now is a good time to start shielding yourself better against people's manipulative gambits, bad moods, emotional immaturity and careless violations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): "Dear Rob: I once heard you say that the best method for solving any dilemma is to sit silently, calm my mind and listen for the 'still, small voice of the teacher within me.' I have tried your advice, but I have never detected this voice. What am I doing wrong? — Deprived Taurus." Dear Taurus: Here's how to become available for guidance from the still, small voice of your inner teacher. 1. Go someplace quiet, either in nature or a beloved sanctuary. 2. Shed all your ideas and theories about the nature of your dilemma. 3. Tenderly ask your mind to be empty and serene as you await an intuition. 4. Feel sweet gratitude for each breath as you inhale and exhale. 5. Visualize your inner teacher smiling. 6. Make yourself expectant to receive an insightful blessing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): In the parlance of people who love to trek in natural places, a "cobbknocker" refers to a hiker who precedes you and knocks down the spider webs crossing the trail. I would love for you to procure a similar service for all your adventures in the coming weeks, not just hiking. See if you can coax or hire helpers to clear a path for you in everything you do. I want you to be able to concentrate on the essentials and not get bogged down or distracted by trivial obstructions. You need spaciousness and ease.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): When you are at your Cancerian best, you nurture others but don't smother them with excessive care. You give your gifts without undermining your own interests. You are deeply receptive and sensitive without opening yourself to be abused or wounded. In my astrological estimation, you are currently expressing these qualities with maximum grace and precision. Congratulations on your ever-ripening emotional intelligence! I trust you will be rewarded with grateful favors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Here's the deal that life is offering: You temporarily suspend your drive to possess crystalline certainty, and you agree to love and thrive on ambiguity and paradox. In return, you will be given help in identifying unconscious and hidden factors at work in your destiny. You will be empowered to make confident decisions without needing them to be perfect. And you will learn more about the wise art of feeling appreciative reverence for great mysteries.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): I once had a Virgo girlfriend. She was talented, hardworking, meticulous, organized, health-conscious, and resourceful. She also hated it if I neglected to put the jar of honey back in the cupboard immediately after using it. She would get upset if I neglected to remove my shoes as soon as I entered the house. Her fussy perfectionism wasn't the reason we ultimately broke up, but it did take a toll on me. I bring this to your attention because I hope you will mostly keep fussy perfectionism to yourself in the coming weeks. It's fine if you want to indulge it while alone and doing your own work, but don't demand that others be equally fastidious. Providing this leeway now will serve you well in the long run. You can earn slack and generate good will that comes in handy when you least expect it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your bulboid corpuscles are specialized nerve cells in your skin that can experience intense tactile pleasure — more so than any other nerve cells. They are located in your lips, tongue and genitals. According to my analysis of your astrological potentials, these ultra-sensitive receptors will be turned on extra high in the coming weeks. So will their metaphysical and metaphorical equivalents. That's why I predict you will gather in more bliss than you have in a long time. Please give yourself permission to exceed your usual quota.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Once upon a time, you were more hazardous to yourself than you are now. I'm pleased about the progress you have made to treat yourself with greater care and compassion. It hasn't been easy. You had to learn mysterious secrets about dealing with your inner troublemaker. You had to figure out how to channel its efforts into generating benevolent and healing trouble. There's still more work to be done, though. Your inner troublemaker isn't completely redeemed and reformed. But you now have a chance to bring it more fully into its destined role as your ally and helper.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): I predict that your past will soon transform. You may discover new details about old events. Stories you have told and told about your history will acquire new meanings. You will be wise to reinterpret certain plot twists you thought you had figured out long ago. There may not be anything as radical as uncovering wild secrets about your true origins — although I wouldn't discount that possibility. So expect a surprise or two, Sagittarius. But I suspect you will ultimately be pleased to revise your theories about how you came to be the resilient soul you are now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Of all the astrological signs, Capricorns are least likely to consult horoscopes. There are many skeptical people among your tribe who say, "Astrology is irrational and illogical. It can't be precise and accurate, so it's not even real." My personal research also suggests, however, that a surprising percentage of Capricorns pretend not to be drawn to astrology even though they actually are. They may even hide their interest from others. How do I feel about all this? It doesn't affect me as I compose your oracles. I love you as much as the other signs, and I always give you my best effort. Now I suggest that in the coming weeks, you do what I do: Give your utmost in every situation, even if some people are resistant to or doubtful of your contributions. Be confident as you offer your excellence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are ready to graduate to a higher octave of maturity and wisdom about everything related to love, romance and sex. It will be instructive to meditate on your previous experiences. So I invite you to ruminate on the following questions. 1. What important lessons have you learned about the kind of togetherness you want? 2. What important lessons have you learned about the kind of togetherness you don't want? 3. What important lessons have you learned about how to keep yourself emotionally healthy while in an intimate relationship?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Are you longing to feel safe, cozy and unperturbable? Are you fantasizing about how perfect life would be if you could seal yourself inside your comfort zone and avoid novelty and change for a while? I hope not, Pisces! By my astrological reckoning, you are due for a phase of experimentation and expansion. You will thrive on the challenges of big riddles and intriguing teasers. Please take full advantage of this fun opportunity to hone your intuition and move way beyond random guesswork. For extra credit: Prove the theory that it's very possible to cultivate and attract good luck.
